I first came to know homeopathy at a time when I was very sick. Through work over a few years with my homeopath, I saw my health and life change.

Homeopathy has played a key role in my profound healing from chronic asthma and trauma. The depth and nature of this healing work has helped show me the wisdom of my body, its messages, and the potential for building greater capacity for health and well-being.

The invitation to study homeopathy kept 'knocking' until I couldn't ignore it any longer. I found the ethos of AHE to be beautifully aligned with my own, namely a huge emphasis on academic rigor and joy - two critical elements for preparing to work as a healer! I completed the 4-year part-time program at AHE in 2018 and have been in full-time private practice since then.

The slow, deep healing of homeopathy builds the capacity to hold more life.

My first career was in higher education, and I'm pleased to merge these passions by returning to AHE as faculty, working with HOHM Research, and serving as a Commissioner with the Accreditation Commission for Homeopathy Education in North America.

I am a homeopath, educator and a lifelong learner. While healthy living has been my pursuit for much of my life, I discovered homeopathy out of necessity when my children were very young. My son, in particular, had many issues that we were struggling with including trouble with digestion, multiple food intolerances, repeated ear infections, and significant behavioral problems. In spite of our best efforts and resources, he was kicked out of daycare by the time he was 2 years old.

Although this was devastating to our family at the time, it also lit a fire under me to find a real solution to address the underlying problem...and I ultimately found that solution using homeopathy.

Homeopathy allowed for profound changes in our health and our lives and inspired me to learn more!

After almost 10 years of using homeopathy with my family, I began an apprenticeship with my homeopath where I gained invaluable experience and soon realized that it was time to pursue my dream. I resigned from a 20-year teaching career in public education and chose to study classical homeopathy at the Academy of Homeopathy Education (AHE) where I graduated in 2018 as a member of the second completely full-time homeopathy class in the United States.

I now enjoy a thriving homeopathy practice where I help people restore their body's wellness and understand how to support the natural principles of healing the human body.

In 2019, I was hired on as a staff member at AHE where I continue to provide education and academic support as well as assistance in clinical supervision to homeopathy students. Additionally, I serve as a volunteer practitioner with Homeopathy Help Network.

Although our family has a history of autoimmune disease, it wasn't until our son became ill at age 3 that I went into a frenzy. Searching high and low, we began a journey that changed my life. Homeopathy came to us right at the beginning of this journey, and it has been the cornerstone of healing for our entire family over the past 11 years.

I love working with people on their journey toward healing.

As a trained engineer that worked with Lockheed Martin for years before starting a family, studying homeopathy seemed unattainable. Lots of excuses – I don't have a background in health care, I'm too old to go back to school, changing careers seems scary and permanent... but homeopathy just kept calling. And after years of doubt, I decided to give it a try and I joined the AHE full-time program graduating 2 years later.

Before I knew it, I had a business plan and LLC, became certified as a classical homeopath, started seeing clients, and now 2 years later have a thriving practice! As I look back on those years of tears and confusion and pain, I can honestly say I would do it all over again to get to this place.

Community, teamwork, and mentorship are important to me, so I have enjoyed working for AHE as a staff member in various roles including admissions specialist, clinical supervisor, and mentor. In the past few years, I have also had the amazing opportunity to work as a practitioner on the Homeopathy Help Network, helping clients with acute symptoms and working with other experienced practitioners to understand epidemics and the role homeopathy can play.

The last 4 years have been some of the best of my life, and I'm so excited to see what is in store for the future!

Access to healing is for everyone.

MEG SMITH, CCH

HOMEOPATH.
WRITER.
VOLUNTEER.

Meg Smith is a homeopath based in Southern Vermont and a graduate of AHE. With nearly fifteen years of experience in the holistic wellness space, Meg is also a trained herbalist, enthusiastic home cook, avid yoga practitioner, published author, and a recovering classical musician.

Raised in rural Pennsylvania, Meg studied and performed internationally as an oboist and English hornist before discovering the healing arts.

After having children, she became active in the Philadelphia birth community and served as a doula and postpartum caregiver for dozens of families. Prompted by a severe illness that impacted her younger child, Meg embarked on a journey that would lead to her career in homeopathy.

In addition to sustaining a busy private practice, she is honored to volunteer as a board member for AHE and HOHM Foundation, and as a practitioner with the Homeopathy Help Network team, which is committed to ensuring that people from all walks of life can benefit from professional homeopathic care during acute and chronic illness.

ACCESS TO HEALING IS FOR EVERYONE

She is also a passionate advocate for high-quality education and the further elevation of homeopathy among the ranks of complementary and alternative therapies.

When not sporting her homeopath hat, Meg spends time working on her next book (or writing letters as a form of procrastination), playing with yarn, and taming a small corner of her 100-acre homestead, growing for both the dinner table and her herbal pharmacy. At least twice daily she can be found walking down a dirt road or forest trail with some combination of her two rambunctious dogs, two teenage children, and one partner.

As I stepped into motherhood, I searched for a gentle health system that understood the basic principles that we are NEVER just parts, rather always a whole. I wanted an approach that considered the physical, emotional, mental, spiritual, genetic, and environmental aspects of my family.

My search was challenging, and I explored many, many modalities. Some were helpful, some made things worse, yet nothing really made a difference. These experiences enabled me to have a huge expansion of my perception of health and disease, something I am incredibly grateful for.

I wanted a therapy that was rapid, gentle, pleasant and a complete and permanent restoration of health in the surest, simplest and least harmful way.

AHE's cohort classes, community, commitment, real-time clinical experience, academic rigor, and dynamic teachers made my experience not only enjoyable but prepared me for what it takes to be a successful classical Homeopath!

I've been in private practice for 2 years, and have joined as a volunteer at the Homeopathy Help Now Acute clinic. This has been one of the best experiences I've had in terms of hands-on experience with acute case-taking skills and client management. My confidence and competence have grown leaps and bounds. I never would have gotten these sorts of experiences in private practice.... it would have taken me 5+ years!

If you are looking for an incredible experience with a passionate brilliant team of professionals, I encourage you to join AHE. They truly have so much to offer! It's a heartfelt feeling to know even after graduation, there's still lots to participate in, volunteering, post-grad supervision classes with Denise, HHN acute clinic, etc. You'll never hear me say "I am all alone on my island practicing homeopathy with no community or support."

I'm a homeschooling mother of two with a degree in Business Administration. I spent the bulk of my career as an entrepreneur in the beauty and holistic wellness space. I loved the travel, creativity, and face-to-face time with my clients.

Embrace and love your body. It's the most amazing thing you will ever own. -Unknown

The first time I tried homeopathy was when my eldest son was born, but it was after a major health crisis that forced me to close my business that I decided to dive deeper. Homeopathy grabbed me and I knew I had to learn more.

Through serendipitous circumstances, I was offered a work-study position with AHE. It was a journey of rigorous study, personal growth, healing, compassion, tears, and lots and lots of laughter.

I love my AHE family so much and am thankful to be able to use my creative skills for the advancement of homeopathy.

In addition to growing my private practice, I volunteer with the Homeopathy Help Network and do digital design and marketing for both AHE and the National Center for Homeopathy.
